

Abstract of the Disclosure

A line of text data inputted and displayed, character by character or stroke by stroke, is looked up in a dictionary to find a unique line of text data to represent a unique word in the dictionary which has the same leading part as the inputted data or which includes the inputted data. If the unique word is determined, the remainder of the data to be inputted is supplemented from the dictionary thus increasing the text input efficiency.